About This Resource

What is the purpose of this resource?

You, your family members, and care partners can use this resource to learn about IDD-inclusive living arrangements that may be offered near you or in other areas of North Carolina.

IMPORTANT! Many of the communities listed in this resource may not have space to accept new residents at this time. However many offer social and informational opportunities to learn and connect with them. Visit their websites for information and participate in their activities. Through these connections you can work together to create more inclusive housing opportunities in new locations to meet the needs of more people.

What is IDD Inclusive Housing?

- IDD Inclusive housing can look different in each community, but all IDD Inclusive communities offer adults with IDD many choices about new living spaces that support more independent living. Most times the living space is separate from where their family members live.
- IDD Inclusive housing is located with or near other individuals with IDD and near neighbors who try to make everyone feel welcome and supported.
- Some IDD Inclusive housing offers supports and services for each person's physical, emotional, and social needs.
- Residents in IDD-inclusive communities have many opportunities to participate in community activities and develop relationships with their neighbors, including people with IDD and people who do not have disabilities. Residents also have supports to find and access services and activities they choose. For example, many IDD-inclusive communities are located near public transportation access points and some have community facilitators to assist people to connect with each other and to support access to services and activities such as training, employment, health care, and recreation.

About This Resource

Who prepared this resource?

This resource was produced by UNC Teach Autism Program researchers, students, and volunteers, and community members who participate in the WorkTogether Housing & Community Living Work Group.

This collaborative work was supported by grant # 90DNCE0006 from the US Administration for Community Living, Dept. of Health and Human Services awarded to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

What is WorkTogetherNC? WorkTogetherNC is a project that helps individuals with intellectual and developmental disabilities find the community supports they need as they grow into and through adulthood. This might include finding a job or place to volunteer, continued education, housing, social and recreational opportunities, and more.

How To Use This Resource

How To Use This Resource

Read through this resource to learn about new kinds of housing communities in locations throughout the state of North Carolina where individuals with intellectual and developmental disabilities (IDD) have choices about how they can live more independently with positive social connections and personal support networks.

Communities are listed in four sections. All the communities in each section are located in the same Managed Care Organization (MCO) region.

To find the communities that are closest to where you live now:

1. Look at the map on p. 6 to find the county in which you live and see which color and MCO region it's in.
2. Then, go to the section in this resource for that region.

Example: You live in Raleigh in Wake County. Wake County is in the purple Alliance Health Region. Go to the listings for the Alliance region starting on p. 16 with purple page top banners and read about those communities.

Also, you can check out which counties are near where you live. If a county next to yours is in a different color/MCO region, you can read through that region's list. Use the black location pin symbol (📍) to find communities in the nearby region that might also be close to your current home.
